Situational and minor cultural profanity (no f-bombs)

**I write convoluted story-lines; speed reading risks missing clues and subtleties.

Sunny Gail Briscoe is loved by her famous childhood sweetheart, Country Music Star, Zane Winters. He brought her back to him by recording her original song, “For the First Time”. The song is about his betrayal of their youthful love.

Sunny is now an undercover, VIP bodyguard hired to protect Zane from an escalating stalker. When he proposes marriage at a Country Music Awards program on stage, conflict reigns. They win Country Music Video of the Year, and their lives are plunged into havoc when the stalker tries to punish him by attempts to kill Sunny; believing her to be his intended bride.

Their lives are further complicated by the appearance of the man from Sunny’s past, who was “the main character” in her song: the man who stirred her body and her soul when she experienced making love ‘for the first time’

As the danger escalates it will touch the lives of their extended families and threaten their personal and professional futures with the revelation of a ‘secret love child’.

Cry for the heartbreak of young love betrayed, cheer the triumph of single parenting; relate to the ultimate tests of friendships; bow to the wisdom of family mentors; and applaud the victory of the love child finding their way in the world. Ultimately, bond with a “woman’s woman” who brings dignity as she brings justice, and lives her life without apology. Meet the men who love her equally, but cannot share her.
